

Call Analysis Report

The buyer wanted a 4–5ft front fence + sliding gate, liked the material and decoration, got pricing, but left without signing because the seller failed to pre-frame a same-day decision and never secured spouse/decision authority.

Generated

January 10, 2026 at 06:47

Classification

Confidential

Executive Summary

Call Outcome: NEEDS_FOLLOWUP

The buyer wanted a 4–5ft front fence + sliding gate, liked the material and decoration, got pricing, but left without signing because the seller failed to pre-frame a same-day decision and never secured spouse/decision authority.

Key Topics: front fence height (4ft vs 5ft vs 6ft) | sliding gate (manual vs electric, rail/concrete support) | materials (vinyl vs composite vs aluminum/iron decoration) | warranty/maintenance | design samples/decoration availability

Customer Interest

Interest Level	Buying Readiness
WARM	70%

What They Want:

A durable, low-maintenance 4–5ft front fence that preserves curb appeal and view, with a smooth sliding gate and a decorative top option, installed by a credible contractor with clear warranty and a confident plan.

Main Concerns:

- Authority: wife approval and joint decision
- Risk/regret: fear of choosing wrong style/material and having to redo it
- Trust/competence: seller uncertainty (samples, 'should be someone else', first time doing decoration)
- Price/value alignment: wants 'best offer' but not ready to commit without spouse

Objections (4)

#1 SPOUSE_DECISION | Score: 3/10

Customer:

""First thing I need to know what can you offer... the prices, then I can talk to my wife after that.""

Underlying Concern:

He doesn't want to be the only decision-maker and risk blame/regret; he wants shared ownership of the decision.

Recommended Response:

""Totally fair. To make this easy on you—Alicia is a 'yes/no' with you, right? If she is, let's have her join us for the last 10 minutes or I'll FaceTime her when I show the numbers so you don't have to re-explain the design, the warranty, and the gate support. Would that work?""

#2 TRUST | Score: 2/10

Customer:

""I thought you will bring in some samples or something to show me.""

Underlying Concern:

Competence/credibility: if you can't show options smoothly, can you execute the install smoothly?

Recommended Response:

""You're right—that's on me. Here's what I'll do: I'm going to show you 6 installs that match exactly what you described (4–5ft, unprivacy, with the top decoration), and I have the composite/vinyl samples in the car so you can feel the strength. Then I'll price the exact design you pick. Deal?""

#3 SPOUSE_DECISION | Score: 4/10

Customer:

""No, let me talk to my wife about this.""

Underlying Concern:

Decision authority not aligned; also using spouse as a safe delay to avoid commitment.

Recommended Response:

""Of course. Just so I don't guess—when you talk to her, what do you think she'll care about most: the look from the street, the gap size, or the total investment? Let's call her for two minutes right now, I'll show her the decoration and the color you liked, and if she's a yes we'll lock the material order today. Fair?""

#4 NEED_TO_THINK | Score: 3/10

Customer:

""I don't want to sign anything... I want to see what you best offer.""

Underlying Concern:

Fear of commitment without certainty + wants leverage/discount without giving commitment.

Recommended Response:

""Fair. I'm not asking you to sign your life away. Here's the deal: if I get you the best number today, we lock it with a small deposit that simply reserves your materials and install week. If Alicia says no within 48 hours, I'll release it. If I can get the unprivacy + decoration at 5ft to $X, are you comfortable doing that today?""

Missed Closing Opportunities (3)

#1 Trial @ 32:54

Customer Signal:

"Buyer is impressed by composite sample: "It just looks nice... I was expecting something like Home Depot.""

Suggested Close:

""

#2 Summary @ 53:55

Customer Signal:

"Buyer accepts pricing and asks about discounts and definitions (senior, Costco)."

Suggested Close:

""

#3 Urgency @ 83:59

Customer Signal:

""What's your best offer on that one?... I'm seriously want to do the job.""

Suggested Close:

""

Storytelling Analysis (1)

#1 Customer Success @ 45:11

Original:

"Maria did composite, showed it off after church, referrals led to $200k in projects."

Improved Version:

""Arturo, quick story because it's exactly your situation—front fence, didn't want a 6-foot wall, and the husband was worried it would look 'too closed in.' We did a 5-foot unprivacy composite with a decorative top—almost the same color you pointed to. His wife's big concern was: 'Are we going to regret the look from the street?' So before we ordered, I FaceTimed her right there, showed her the sample in my hand, and pulled up two installs on the iPad from the same angle as your driveway. She said, 'Okay, that's the look.' They almost waited "a few days," but the reason they didn't is the last contractor they used changed pricing and lead time—materials jumped and their install got pushed out. They moved forward that day with a small deposit to lock the materials. We installed in two days, zero painting, and two years later he told me the best part is he never thinks about it—no rust, no peeling, and it still looks new. If we do the same thing—FaceTime Alicia for 2 minutes and lock the materials—would that give you the clarity you want without rushing?"

It mirrors Arturo's exact hesitation (regret + wife approval), shows a clear decision moment, highlights cost of waiting (lead time/pricing), and bridges directly into a same-day micro-commitment.

Coaching Recommendations

[CRITICAL] Pre Frame

[HIGH] Discovery

[HIGH] Closing

Seller Performance

Overall Score: 44/10

Strengths:

- + Stayed with the appointment long enough to reach a real quote (~53 min)
- + Brought physical samples eventually (composite/vinyl) which increased perceived quality
- + Handled technical questions about posts, gaps, rail/concrete support reasonably
- + Provided credibility proof (license/insurance) which can help trust